Since Otero has returned, the re-organization of the has-beens probably will be delayed no longer.

"Not collars that wilt, but collars that won't is what mankind longs for," says the Kansas City Times.

Former Governor Otero returns from a trip around the world with a horizon still too narrow to include Arizona.

The Santa Fe New Mexican predicts that the Republicans will carry Chaves county. As a matter of fact they probably will not nominate a county ticket.

The Albuquerque Advertiser makes the timely suggestion that the Territorial Democratic Committee should hold a meeting and either decide to do something or quit.

The New Mexican observes that Santa Fe people are willing to freely share their delightful climate with visitors, but the tourist is advised to bring along enough money to pay his board bill.

The removal of a bunch of Otero officials from the penitentiary was not featured in the columns of the New Mexican. The chief organ of Oterism is playing a horn in the Hagerman band wagon just now, but it likes the old tunes best, and it does not enjoy seeing any of the old horn tooters go to the scrap heap.—Albuquerque Advertiser.

Announcing the suspension of his paper, an editor in Russian Poland says that since he started to fill a long felt want five years ago, he has spent four and a half years in jail and paid $3,750 in fines. What are the sorrows of the American country editor compared with such a tale of woe as this?

He who has personality, who brings things to pass, who has within himself the power of achievement, never waits to see what others are going to do, he does not wait for precedents—he thinks his own thoughts, lays his own plans, directs his own energy, accomplishes his own results. He does not become discouraged because of difficulties in the way, but moves them out as he marches forward.—Springer Stockman.

The Democratic papers are willing to let Delegate Andrews clear himself by a fair trial; but not being committed to his support before the charges were brought against him, the Democratic papers are not wasting any bouquets. They have simply let him alone since his election to make his own record in his own way,—but the Democratic party will nominate against him a candidate whose record is above suspicion.

"As it is understood that Governor Kibby, of Arizona, refuses to change his opinion on statehood, he will soon 'resign,' and his place will be filled by a carpetbagger from Michigan. Even if Kibby is wrong, he is entitled to credit in doing more than a great many politicians over this way had the moral courage to do—refusing to change his position for a job. We like that kind of a man, no matter what his politics and opinions happen to be.—Albuquerque Advertiser.

The nominating primary is finding favor wherever tried. In no state where parties have adopted it is there any talk of returning to the old plan, or of inventing a new one. General satisfaction is expressed with results obtained where the voters have had opportunity to register their choice as to the party ticket. Senatorial elections so decided have been so approved that no longer any need is felt for amending the constitution in behalf of popular election of senators. The primary method of instructing the legislatures gives us that in effect, and no additional machinery is necessary. In Kentucky a democratic primary has been called to nominate both a state ticket and a candidate for United States senator. And over on the Pacific, the Portland Oregonian says: "In Oregon the political party convention is a thing of the past. Whatever else may be said against the nominating primary, it puts out of business an oligarchy of professional managers—even though the people in making direct nominations may not always do their work wisely or well."—Albuquerque Journal.

BRYAN A STATESMAN.

Tucson Daily Star.
Bryan is a courageous statesman. He does not hide his opinions under a bushel, but declares them. He is declaring them now so that his party may know just where he stands before the battle for the nomination comes on.

That is Col. Bryan. He has the courage of his convictions and he has a very clear and forceful way of expressing his convictions.

There are not a few leaders in the democratic party who would like to catch Bryan in his utterances, but they will fail to entrap him, he has nothing to conceal. He has strong convictions on public questions, and he is always prepared to make them known. This is wherein the statesman differs from the politician. Bryan is a statesman of broad calibre, and deep convictions, always guided by a good conscience.

REVILING THE DEMOCRATS.

Mr. Taft is disputing with Mr. Roosevelt the championship of the noble profession of diplomacy—hiding the truth. In his speech to the negroes and Federal office-holders of North Carolina, June 9th, he declared that while the Democratic leaders have been for years declaring against corporations, "they have instituted no legislative steps in all this time to restrain the abuses." Taft knew this to be utterly false. He knew, for instance, that the Tillman-Gillespie resolution under which the Standard Oil and the railroads are now being investigated was of Democratic origin. He knew that the Tillman bill to prohibit corporations from contributing to party corruption funds,—a bill which passed the Senate, but was opposed by Root, Roosevelt, and Taft so that it failed in the House—was of Democratic origin. He knew that the Democrats in Congress have introduced numberless measures designed to curb the trusts by abolishing the tariff duties on trust-made goods. He knew that nearly every Democratic state had established a railroad commission to prevent extortions and discriminations by the railroad companies. In fine, Taft knew that he was evading the truth and gloried in what he was doing. Let him read what Roosevelt has written about liars, and he will probably think less of himself, unless Roosevelt has told him not to believe such things.

Where is Elisha Wilson?

W. J. Wilson, of this city is greatly worried about his 16-year-old son, Elisha, who left Roswell about two months ago and was last heard of in Los Angeles, California, on June 21. Two days after that date the lad wrote his father from Los Angeles stating that he had no more than reached that city than he fell off a street car and broke his arm. He wrote for money, saying that Capt. Simpson, of the Salvation Army and formerly of this city, would care for him until the money arrived. The father answered that if his son would send his street address he would telegraph him the required funds. His letter was never answered. After waiting a reasonable length of time the father wrote the chief of police at Los Angeles, and although it has been ten days since he sent the letter, the chief has not replied. The father fears foul play and solicits the aid of the newspapers in the search for his son. If any reader knows a clew that will help him, he will be truly grateful for information.

The missing boy was formerly employed as "devil" in the Record office, and the printers tell a story which indicates that he was able to take care of himself under ordinary circumstances. The foreman asked him one morning how long he had lived in Roswell. "Four months," replied the boy. "Oh, you're a tenderfoot," ejaculated the foreman. "Tenderfoot, nothin, I went barefooted in Texas twelve years before comin' here."

T. M. Stansell left St. Mary's hospital this morning after being there four days while undergoing an operation on his left foot. Several days ago he was bitten on the foot by an insect, and blood-poisoning set in. His foot is now much better, but he is still unable to walk upon it. His son, Nate Stansell, who was hurt by having the pole of a hay-stacker fall on his head, was able to leave the hospital yesterday.
